High Velocity
Cartridges

For ducks, geese, brant, turkey, and so forth, you'll find no better load than Peters "High Velocity"—the "long-range game getter." Loaded with the correct amount of progressive burning powder and smooth polished shot by the exclusive Peters Method, wadded with genuine hair-felt wadding, head reinforced with steel, and crimped with a firm bevel crimp—these are but a few of the reasons for the superior game-getting patterns obtained with these longer range High Velocity Shells.

Try them!

This is the fifth of a series of page messages covering important features of the P line. Save this for future reference and look for a new message in the next issue of this magazine.

WHEN hunters gather round the camp fire and tell of their hunting prowess, it is not their luck of which they are most proud, but their Skill.

But to back that skill to the limit, to make sure that you get one of the several deer you see a season, you need accurate, straight-shooting ammunition. You are sure of it, doubly sure in Peters.

Peters Game Cartridges, like Peters Shotgun Shells, are loaded under the Peters exclusive method. The bullets are perfectly run and evenly balanced, so that they spin true. The Primer is a special Peters development and protected by letters patent.

The result is a combination of loading, primer, and bullet that hits where you hold and stops what you hit—the maximum of accuracy with extreme shocking power.

For medium and large game, for deer, antelope, and similar game, you'll find Peters .25 Rem., .25-35 and .30-30 High Velocity Cartridges the ideal loads for some real shooting.

Try Peters next time in whatever cartridge your rifle is chambered for, and note their superior qualities. Thousands of shooters who have will use nothing else. Interesting ammunition information sent on request.

THE Swiss, who last year took the rifle championship of the world away from America, have picked their International team, and have placed it in intensive training. It is time for America to get its team together and train it.

In order to do this it is necessary to ask the shooters of the country to contribute to a fund for the International team. Each shooter who wants to help America regain the title is asked to contribute at least one dollar. Pin your contribution to the attached form and send it to the National Rifle Association, 1108 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C.

Sea Girt Stages a Revival

C. B. Lister

SEA GIRT—the range of a thousand memories, myths and anecdotes.

The scene of the original National Matches was the host this year to a majority of the National Rifle Association competitions. If the return to Sea Girt demonstrated any one thing, it was a demonstration of the growth of the shooting game in this country in the past two decades. The Sea Girt which accommodated the National Rifle Matches of 1903 to 1906 was crowded to capacity and beyond in the effort to accommodate a portion of the N. R. A. Matches in 1926.

The actual conduct of the matches was handled by the Marines under the direction of Lieut. Col. D. C. McDougal, aided and abetted by Maj. Harry B. Smith and a staff, a roll-call of which would sound like a roll-call of the old-timers who baptized the Sea Girt Range before the first National Match had been authorized by Congress. The command of the camp, arrangements for quartering and massing of competitors, etc., rested in Brig. Gen. Bird W. Spencer, who needs no introduction to the riflemen of this country.

In an effort to provide the maximum amount of competition within a two weeks' period, the National Rifle Association and New Jersey State Rifle Association Matches had been scheduled together so that the range would be operating at capacity at all times. The experience of the match would appear to indicate that a better arrangement would have been to set aside a certain part of the program for New Jersey Matches and a certain part for N. R. A. Matches, and if an economy-mittem Congress again withholds support from the National Matches, some such plan will probably be followed in the allocation of N. R. A. Matches for next year.

The northeast rains and gales which had lashed the Jersey Coast all summer had not quite spent themselves when the first arrivals made their appearance at Sea Girt on Friday and Saturday, September 3 and 4, and the shooting on the 5th and 6th was also done under varying conditions of intermittent sunshine, rain and wind. By Tuesday, however, the Marines had demonstrated that, given sufficient length of time, they could control any situation, even the weather, and during the remainder of the program the competitions were carried on without interruption on the part of Jupiter Pluvius. There was plenty of wind at times, but this merely served to make the events a little harder fought and saved the Statistical Office the work of deciding who won a match by virtue of the Creedmoor count.

The Marines brought with them as a member of their rifle team one J. M. Thomas, a gunnery sergeant who has previously been heard of from time to time as a rifle and pistol shot. This worthy gentleman is about to retire from the Marine Corps. Why he should be retired, in view of what he accomplished at Sea Girt, is something of a mystery. His 97 in the Wimbledon was three points behind the winner, which was apparently discouraging to him, as he then proceeded to drop but four points from the President's course, emerging with a total of 196, which was four points better than his nearest rival, Lieut. H. W. Barrick of the Infantry, was able to turn in. He then went into the Nevada, which was an aggregate of the 600-yard stage of the President's Match, the first ten record shots in the Spencer Match and a separate stage at 900 yards, and dropped just two points over the course for a total of 148, one point better than the score of Private First Class Russell F. Seitzinger, also of the Marine Corps.

The Spencer Match, calling for 15 shots at 1,200 yards, was probably the greatest match from the standpoint of the ability to dope conditions which was fired this year. The wind was both high and inconsistent. It ran from probably eighteen to twenty-five miles an hour and fish-tailed from 1 to 3 o'clock. Sergt. Thomas slipped his first fourteen shots straight down the groove for fives and V's, dropping his last shot for a four hanging on to the black at 1 o'clock. Lieut. Frank S. Gilman, also of the Marine Corps, turned in a similar score, but was outranked by the number of V's turned in by the veteran, Thomas.

In the Swiss Match, fired at 500 yards on a 16-inch bullseye, Thomas was runner-up with a string of eight consecutive, Sergt. J. R. Tucker of the Marine Corps being the winner with a total of 814.

The weather at Sea Girt this year was not conducive to record-breaking performances, but in addition to the all-around work of Sergt. Thomas, the performance of Lieut. Hohn and Sergt. Tucker in the Wimbledon, with totals of 100 x 100 and the shooting of Corp. Wagener and Sergt. Tucker in the Marine Corps with totals of 198 are well worthy of special mention.

Because of the weather conditions and the fact that they had to pick up their range and move it every now and then in order to accommodate the heavy schedule of Service Rifle events, the small-bore shooters never really got started, and the defeat which they suffered at the hands of the British in the Dewar Cup Match, which concluded the small-bore program, was inevitable. In only a few cases were scores turned in in the small-bore competitions which would have gained a place in the matches fired at Camp Perry. The crowded range also kept the hand-gun men in the background for several days, but as soon as targets were available they went to work, and, as is usual, the pistol range became one of the busiest spots in the camp. Any record-breaking scores were out of the question, however, in the face of the high winds which prevailed most of the time.

Commercial Row, around which the social life at the National Matches very largely centers, was a quiet place at Sea Girt. With no permanent huts available, the commercial men did not set up any of the elaborate exhibits which make their row the center of attraction at Perry. They were all there, however, and all ready and willing to lend a hand to make the shoot a success. Kahrs of Remington, Tewes of Peters, Marsh and Weldin of Hercules, Groondyke of duPont, Riggs of Western, Davis and Virgil Richard of Winchester, Dooley of U. S., and Mitchell and Fitz of Colt's spent the entire period at the matches. K. K. V. Casey of du Pont, who was one of those who knew Sea Girt so well in the old days, was on the range most of the time and took an active part in a number of the competitions.

Unfortunately, no provision had been made for a Squaw Camp, and a number of members of the Association who came to the matches expecting to put up their families in a Squaw Camp, as had been mentioned in the program, found it necessary to locate quarters in some of the many boarding and rooming houses in the neighboring seacoast towns. This failure to provide for the families of competitors cost something in attendance, in addition to the discomfort to the competitors themselves.

Taken as a whole, the Sea Girt Matches were an excellent regional competition. They were not in any sense a substitute for the National Matches. They helped the shooting game in the East to the extent that the New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington papers gave them very good publicity in exactly the same way that the competitions at Wakefield help the game in New England through the publicity that they obtain. Combined with the matches at Wakefield, at Fort Screven, Ga., Harrisburg, Ohio, and at Ft. Lawton, Wash., the Sea Girt competitions aid a great deal to plug the gap which resulted from the failure of Congress to provide for the National Matches this year. But to any one on the range at Sea Girt, the urgent need of National Matches under the authorization of Congress was most forcibly driven home. It would appear to be advisable to continue these regional competitions even during National Match years, but their proper place in the scheme of things is as a feeder for the National Matches. Through the medium of local publicity they can develop popular interest in the shooting game. By enabling individuals to participate in important shoulder-to-shoulder matches they can develop shooters who will eventually attend the National Matches. Having fulfilled these two missions, they will have attained their objective.

The riflemen of this country owe a great debt of gratitude to Gen. Spencer for the work done at Sea Girt, to Gen. Stevens for the work done at Wakefield, to Gen. Haagood, Commanding General of the Fourth Corps Area, for the splendid matches at Fort Screven, to the Ohio Rifle League for the matches at Harrisburg, Ohio, and to Gen. Alexander of the Ninth Corps Area for the matches scheduled for Fort Lawton in early October. But the drive for an annual National Match must not be abated, regardless of the relative success of these regional matches, if rifle shooting in this country is to continue to move forward.

Pinch Hitting for Camp Perry

By Jack Rohan

A YOUNG cousin of mine came to the house a few months ago and after hanging around a bit made it known that, after the fashion of healthy youngsters, he was hungry. He craved pie. There was no pie. We compromised on bread, butter and sugar. He ate it, but without enthusiasm, a bit glumly, it seemed.

I inquired what was the matter—whether he didn't like his ration.

"Well," he grumbled, "it's better'n nothing when a fellow's hungry, but it's a darned poor excuse for pie."

That's the way most of us feel, I believe, about the matches at Sea Girt, which were held as a substitute for the national matches denied the riflemen of the country in the holy name of governmental economy. They were better than nothing, but they were a darned poor excuse for Camp Perry.

Yet the wonder is, not that they were not an approach to honest-to-goodness National Matches, but that they were as good as they were. It is no easy task for a devoted band of individuals, even aided by some 300 Marines, to reproduce, even on a small scale, matches of the Camp Perry National class. Yet it was done. It was done, thanks to Brig. Gen. Bird W. Spencer, grandfather of New Jersey marksmanship, and long one of the leading figures in the shooting game in the United States; Brig. Gen. M. A. Reckord, executive secretary of the N. R. A.; C. B. Lister, assistant secretary; Col. A. J. Macnab, Jr., of the Army, who taught the American Expeditionary Force what it knew about marksmanship; Lt. Col. Douglas McDougal and Maj. Harry Smith, both of the Marine Corps, and Gen. Lejeune, commander of the Corps.

This group managed to get the matches going when it seemed nothing short of a miracle would provide any near-substitute for National Matches this year. And while most of the big-bore contests were taken by Marines—which was no novelty, the leather-necks having the same habit at Perry—the matches as a whole were better attended than any one had hoped for.

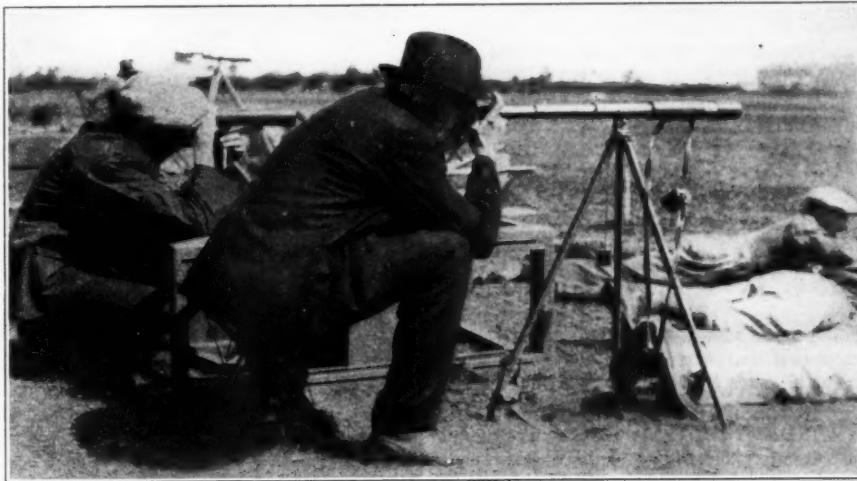

Some of those who attended found cause to grumble because the New Jersey National Guard, which was using the Sea Girt camp for training was unable to depart before the matches got under way. The result was that when the Marines arrived, tentage they had expected to use was occupied by the guardsmen and Col. McDougall was obliged to pitch his own canvas. He finally not only sheltered his troops, but provided accommodations for contestants and some of the commercial men as well. The guardsmen extended their hospitality to all who sought it and increased the size of the matches by numerous entries.

When the show eventually got under way, with those who were unable to get quarters in the camp settled in homes of Sea Girt residents, the place began to look like a reunion of Camp Perry Veterans. Col. Macnab was there as an assistant to the camp commander, Gen. Spencer; Maj. Gen. F. C. Ainsworth, U. S. A. (retired), formerly acting president of the N. R. A., and a director was present; Col. Libbey, and many other veterans of the shooting game were on hand to exchange reminiscences with Harry Pope, Capt. J. J. G. W. Dillin, P. J. O'Hare, K. K. V. Casey, John Hession, Bill Tewes, Frank Kahrs, John Dietz, Lou Weldon. Lt. Col. J. J. Dooley, who was on the firing line as a Marine officer to assist in running the matches; Fitzgerald of Colt, Jones of Smith and Wesson, Harry Marsh, C. S. Landis, Dr. I. R. Calkins, Karl T. Frederick and other veterans of many a National Match.

Saturday, Sunday and Monday the crowd of competitors and visitors taxed the capacity of the "gallery" behind the firing line and there were flivver camp outfits pitched near the club house which bore the mud of Ohio and Texas on their license tags. Tuesday the exodus began of many of those who had been able to stay only over the Labor Day period, but in the meantime a number of the major matches had been fired and considerable small-bore activity attended to. In the small-bore matches everything centered more or less around getting together a team to defend the Dewar Cup. Most busy of this small-bore group were the Wiles boys—Russells both, the elder Russell being "Dad"—Virgil Richard, son of "Cap," who seems likely to surpass his father as a marksman, W. B. Miller of Shillington, Pa., Jerry Hillborn and Mrs. Hillborn, L. J. Corsa, M. W. Dinwiddie, H. J. Gussman, S. R. Hinds, W. Kelsey, W. A. Mackey, H. A. Obenauf, E. Smelter, Sergeant Ollie Schriver, U. S. M. C., the only Marine in captivity who knows anything about small-bores, Charles C. Smith, J. A. Wilners, M. Solomon, William Russ, Charlie Johnson, and a long list of others. Most of this group made the team. With Capt. G. L. Wotkyns, successful skipper of a flock of Dewar teams in his usual place on the quarter-deck, Maj. F. W. Parker of Chicago, acting as head coach, and Bill Tewes, Harry Pope, John Hession, Frank Kahrs, Col. Dooley and a flock of others helping, the material was sifted, coached and prepared for the battle that turned out to be a Waterloo. The best the boys could do was 7933. The British already had hung up a score of 7993—higher than the last record made by the Americans. E. Newitt witnessed the firing as representative of the English team. He was congratulated on behalf of his nation by Capt. Wotkyns, Gen. Spencer, Gen. Reckord and virtually the whole small-bore contingent. The idea seemed to be that the British had been good sports and deserved to have their trophy back home. Incidentally there was a suggestion that next year some arrangement might be made by which the match could be shot shoulder to shoulder in England.

With the Dewar gone beyond recall, the matches were finished up with efficiency and speed, the Marines continuing to gather in the laurels in service rifle contests.

There were two busy little shavers on the .30 caliber firing line during the entire match, their avowed ambition to "lick the Marines in at least one match." These youngsters, sons of Col. McDougall, made a showing that would have done credit to full-grown men—and they weren't the least bit afraid of the reputations of the best shots in the Marine Corps. They didn't "lick the Marines," but they gave the grown-up civilians something to think about on .30 caliber work.

These youngsters took their turn in the Kentucky Rifle Match, which was staged by Capt. Dillon, shooting the heavy old piece with the same skill they displayed in the regular service rifle matches. This match with the old "soft coal" burner of the frontier riflemen created almost as much interest as the classic regulation matches. In the presence of a large gallery Capt. Dillon loaded the ancient rifle, primed it, rammed home a bullet and turned it over to the shooter. Shooting was at fifty yards, off-hand on the standard 50-yard rifle target. The idea was to come as close to the center as possible. One shot was allowed each contestant, who, however, was allowed to re-enter as often as he desired. The match went to Lt. C. E. Voegeli of the United States Navy, Lt. W. B. Mackey of the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Rifle Page, also of the Navy, was second. P. A. Club was third.

Down in the statistical office Lt. Col. J. M. Coward, U. S. A. (retired), gave a demonstration of old-time army efficiency. Bulletins on the various matches were available every evening of the day they were fired. A plentiful supply of bulletins on each match was made available so that every shooter, and any one else who desired the information, could obtain such bulletins from the statistical office by the simple process of picking them off the table on which they were assembled. The scoring details backed up the efficiency of the statistical office with right good will.

The courtesy and consideration shown visitors by the officers and enlisted personnel of the New Jersey Guard, the 44th division of which, commanded by Maj. Gen. Gilmore, was in training when the matches opened, did much toward making the shooters feel at home. Visitors seeking quarters were made the guests of the officers of the division staff and welcomed to their mess. These officers, as well as Gov. Moore of New Jersey, did everything in their power to make the visit of the N. R. A. contingent and that of unattached marksmen pleasant.

Incidentally the Y. M. C. A. provided diversion not only for the members of the guard and marine organizations, but for those of the civilian contingent who preferred to watch a boxing match to holding post mortems on some bum scores. The "Y" entertainment was excellent and appeared to have been appreciated.

A near tragedy came close to marring the serenity of an otherwise pleasant sojourn in Camp Moore. The son of Charlie Johnson's famous white sardine hound, who is attached to the family circle of J. A. Wilners, was struck by a speeding automobile and supposedly fatally injured. Just about the time the mourners had assembled the bone polisher recovered his senses and indicated that he had suffered nothing more serious than a severe headache.

In addition to the governor of "Jersey" and Gen. Gilmore, a number of prominent officers attended the matches. Maj. Gen. Lejeune of the Marine Corps was a visitor, so was Maj. Gen. Allen, the chief of infantry, who drove from Philadelphia with Col. Macnab, Maj. Gen. Creed C. Hammond, chief of the Militia Bureau, Brig. Gen. Gilkyson, adjutant general of New Jersey, and Brig. Gens. Murray and Price also were present. Gen. Gilkyson, toward the end of the matches, was host to the general officers present and to a number of other officers.

The meet was, all in all, a pleasant regional gathering, but—it wasn't even an excuse for National Matches.

SHOOTERS ACTIVE AT STOCKTON, CALIF.

BY GERALD B. WALLACE

Former U. S. Commissioner

THE "Roberts Island Rifle Club" is one of the most successful organizations of its kind in the country. Its membership includes sportsmen who reside in all parts of California, but particularly those living in Stockton and the surrounding agricultural sections. The club boasts of one of the finest rifle ranges in the West.

Five miles from the court house at the county seat, on the banks of the River San Joaquin, stands the spacious club house. It is over 1,000 yards from the main traveled highway. It is just a trifle more than 200 yards from the high levee on the west bank of the river. The firing line is inside the building, and the weather seldom has any terrors for rifle shooting enthusiasts here.

Sixteen years ago the firing line was at the same point in the midst of a wheat field. The shooters then stood on top of an old wooden roller which had served its time at breaking clods. Now, the shots are fired across a field of green alfalfa, which makes aiming particularly restful for the eyes.

The "Roberts Island Rifle Club" had its beginning in 1910. Six young farmers started target shooting on the ranch of Peter Ronkendorf. They then had no equipment except their hunting rifles and some home-made targets. They hung the targets on a barbed-wire fence near the river bank and paced off 200 yards to the south, and proceeded to blaze away with weapons which varied from "twenty-twos" to "forty-five seventies."

In 1911, Herman Strecker, who had been one of the crack shots at the Shellmound Range near Oakland, wandered over to the Ronkendorf Ranch and was invited to join the "bunch." He suggested that a club be organized, and the first meeting was held in a blacksmith shop. The original officers elected were: Herman Strecker, first president; Henry Lehmann, vice-president; Henry Ronkendorf, secretary; Frank Wilfinger, treasurer; Theodore Witt, range officer. The other names on the roster for the first year were those of Herman Lehmann and Harry Wilfinger.

Strecker was the proud possessor of an excellent target outfit, and he encouraged the others to obtain special rifles and sights for range shooting. The club has continued to grow and prosper since its inception. Much of its success is due to Henry Ronkendorf, who has served as president for several years past. He is one of the most enthusiastic riflemen, as well as one of the best shots, on the Pacific Coast. He frankly admits that he is "a nut on shooting." He allows the members to use the range without any charge. He and the other officers of the club, extend an invitation to all readers of this article to drop in at the range any Sunday and enjoy the experience of shooting from a modernly equipped club house, across an alfalfa field, at targets which have a back-stop that can not be missed.

MORRIS, MINN., HAS SUCCESSFUL SEASON

IN the first year of their existence, the Morris (Minn.) Rifle Club have won every match which they have shot this year. The most recent of these competitions were fired August 15 and August 22. The former took place on the range at Morris, where the civilians, shooting a team of five men, defeated a similar team of local National Guardsmen, 448 to 443. The course of fire was at 200 yards, five shots in each of the four standard slow-fire positions. The match on the 22nd was fired at Ortenville and called for ten shots in each position. The riflemen from Morris, with an aggregate of 867, defeated the Ortenville Club by six points. We are expecting to hear from this Morris Club in the coming gallery events.

Good News for the Shooters

THERE was an item of news in the Washington papers recently that should be of interest to shooters. It was the announcement that General Summerall will be the next chief of staff of the Army. General Summerall was to the World War what Sheridan was to the Civil War—a hard-boiled, hard-fighting field captain, beloved by the real soldiers and hated by the gold-bricks. General Summerall knows his business. And because he knows his business, he realizes that battles are won by artillery and riflemen and not shovel experts. As chief of staff he will be responsible for the nation's defense. He knows his trade too well to be sold on the dumb-bell idea that this country can be made safe by digging trenches and planting olive trees on the parapets. He knows, too, that the mass of defenders will come from civilian life and that unless they have developed skill with the rifle before they are called to the colors there will be no time to make expert marksmen of them afterward.

Therefore, he can be expected to give a new impetus to civilian marksmanship, to support the National Matches and to co-operate with the organizations which, although they are promoting shooting as a sport, are indirectly training riflemen who will be able to take care of the country in the event of a national emergency.

The AMERICAN RIFLEMAN congratulates Gen. Summerall on the honor bestowed on him by the President. It congratulates the country on having its defense in the hands of one of the greatest soldiers of this generation.

Shooters Mourn a Friend

THE death of Maj. Gen. Robert L. Howze, commanding general of the Fifth Corps Area, with headquarters at Ft. Hayes, Columbus, Ohio, will be mourned by the shooters of Ohio in particular and of the country in general. Gen. Howze was unsparing of his energy in helping the Ohio marksmen to carry on. To his co-operation and interest in shooting was due largely the success of the recent series of matches held in Ohio. Although he has joined his soldier comrades in Valhalla, he will live in the memory of shooting men as a brave, a courteous gentleman and a prized friend.

It Wasn't British

IN the last issue of the AMERICAN RIFLEMAN it was stated editorially that the British, in winning the Dewar match, used British ammunition. This information was gleaned from an official cable. The London agents of Winchester have called the attention of the AMERICAN RIFLEMAN to the fact that 17 members of the British Team used Winchester "Precision." So it appears that American ammunition won, even if American marksmen didn't.

National Matches—Almost

FAILURE of Congress to appropriate for National Matches, which under the law are required to be held annually, revealed two facts. One is that there is a healthy interest in shooting throughout the entire country. The other is that the National Rifle Association is not a "National Match Association" as some of its enemies have at times asserted, but a going concern, constantly increasing its membership, developing a crop of marksmen among the rising generation, and generally attending successfully to its business—which is to promote marksmanship. The establishment of these facts, beyond doubt compensates, in some measure, for the loss of the National Matches.

The interest in shooting was shown by the large number of regional, corps area and local matches held during the period normally devoted to national matches. It was demonstrated by the excellent attendance at Sea Girt, where a sort of substitute for the national matches was shot.

But any individual who attended any regional match, or the Sea Girt shoot, will realize what a complete flop all of these matches were as a substitute for the real thing at Camp Perry.

They may not realize that unless they get busy and prod their Congressmen now they may be enduring the substitute next year also. There is no certainty that we will have National Matches in 1927. Economy is the watchword in Washington and matches cost money. But this is the time to get Congressmen's pledges to support the matches. They are looking for votes. Some of them need votes. But no voter interested in training marksmen should vote for a candidate for Congress who will not pledge himself to support the National Matches.

A Warrior Passes

WHILE the generation in whose hands the defense of the country now rests were testing their rifle skill at Sea Girt, taps sounded for a member of the soldier breed that staked life and substance so this generation might have a nation to defend. Maj. Gen. John Rutter Brooke, last of the general officers of the Civil War, joined his comrades on September 6 at the age of 88. Gen. Brooke's career should be an inspiration to the younger generation. Of a family of soldiers, he fought through the entire Civil War, being severely wounded many times. Later he carried on in Indian campaigns, and still later fought in the Spanish war.

His son, too, was a soldier. His grandson also lives up to the family tradition.

In the face of an epidemic of cake-eaters it is consoling to remember that there still is a liberal sprinkling of the blood of the Gen. Brooke type in the population of this nation. While that spirit lives the nation is safe, despite pacifists and simpletons.

The Southeastern Tournament

By Capt. James C. Reed

ON account of the excellent rifle and machine gun shooting this year in the 8th Infantry at Fort Screven, Ga., Col. Reynolds J. Burt, the commanding officer, and his officers and men were sorely disappointed when the news was received that there would be no National Rifle Matches held at Camp Perry, so they held a shoot of their own from August 20 to 27. The rifle companies of the 8th Infantry at Fort Screven, Ga., qualified 68 per cent of their men as Expert Riflemen and the Machine Gun Company at this post, Company D, qualified 100 per cent of its members as Expert Machine Gunners. Every one, from the commanding officer down, desired to let the world know of their ability and to pit themselves against worthy competitors.

The idea was conceived of having a rifle and pistol tournament at home and the plans to put this in effect were worked out. As far as the details of operating the pits, running the statistical office, supervising the firing line and housing and feeding the visitors, the regiment was well provided with trained and experienced personnel, both commissioned and enlisted. However, the handicap of having to run a rifle shoot without expense to the government seemed an almost insurmountable obstacle.

Following are the officials of the matches: Directors—Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, U. S. A., and Brig. Gen. Joseph D. Leitch, U. S. A.

Executive Officer—Col. Reynolds J. Burt, 8th Infantry.

Assistant to the Executive Officer—Capt. John H. Baxter, 8th Infantry.

Publicity and Reception—Lieut. Col. R. John West, 8th Infantry.

Chief Range Officer—Maj. William J. McCaughey, 8th Infantry.

Statistical Officer and Treasurer—Capt. Philip T. Frey, 8th Infantry.

Supply Officer—Capt. John W. Rodman, 8th Infantry.

Mess Officer—First Lieut. Walter J. Muller, 8th Infantry.

Billeting Officer—First Lieut. Roswell B. Hart, 8th Infantry.

Secretary—Staff Sgt. Frank R. Moran, 8th Infantry.

This is where the wonderful city of Savannah comes into the story. Savannah has always been a stronghold for all things military. The Savannah Rifle Association recently celebrated its 51st anniversary. From 1894 to 1899 Savannah sent a rifle team to the matches at Sea Girt, which never failed to bring home trophy after trophy and medal after medal. In fact, "those boys from Georgia" are still remembered and praised for their wonderful shooting. How fitting, then, that these men should be the ones to come to the rescue.

Through the Savannah Board of Trade a mass meeting was held and a Citizens' Committee of Ways and Means appointed. This committee in a very short time raised sufficient funds to put over the meet. Without this assistance the tournament could not have been held.

The Ways and Means Committee follows: Chas. G. Day, Chairman; Capt. James C. Reed, U. S. A.; First Lieut. R. B. Hart, U. S. A.; Second Lieut. S. S. Hamilton, U. S. A.; Thos. A. Jones, Andrew Aprea, George T. Pate and Geoffrey B. King.

The following is a list of individuals and firms who, by their contributions, assisted materially in the success of the Southeastern Rifle and Pistol Tournament: Maj. Henry Blun, Butler Builders Supply Co., Central of Georgia, Citizens & Southern Bank, City of Savannah, City of Tybee, Chatham County, Espy Cotton Company, Harvey Granger, Hotels Savannah and De Soto, Col. A. R. Lawton, George T. Pate, Savannah Electric Company, Savannah Morning News, Savannah Press, Savannah Real Estate Board, Emmett Wilson, Judge John J. Rourke, Jr., Jack Rabhan Company, Harry Raskin, Investment Corporation of Savannah, Municipal Investment Corporation, H. C. Walther, Calais & Jenkins, Chas. F. Fulton Real Estate Company, Clarke & Clarke, Clarke & Papy, Demmond, Sweat & Brown, Howard & Cook, C. J. Hunter, G. A. Mercer Company, Rowland & Rowland, Arthur C. Stevens, Willcox & Seaman, R. L. Cooper, A. F. King & Son, W. F. Lynes & Company, W. R. Morrison, Edw. S. Stoddard, Leigh M. White Company, T. A. Waters, M. H. Schaul & Company, Bankers Securities Company, George W. Hunt, R. L. Schley, C. M. Lynch and Cain Realty Company.

The states of Florida, Georgia, South and North Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana constitute what now is known as the 4th Corps Area; however, the old Southeastern Department was practically the same. From this area the attendants and competitors came. The states of Florida, Georgia and South Carolina turned out for the tournament, both civilian and National Guard teams, in wonderful style.

Teams from the following organizations attended the tournament:

124th Infantry, Florida National Guard.
122d Infantry, Georgia National Guard.
118th Infantry, South Carolina National Guard.

The Savannah Rifle Association, Savannah, Ga.

The Jacksonville Rifle Club, Jacksonville, Fla.

The Gastonia Rifle Club, Gastonia, N. C.
The Old Guard Rifle Club, Atlanta, Ga.
118th Field Artillery, Georgia National Guard.

22d Infantry, U. S. A., Fort McPherson, Ga.

13th Coast Artillery, Fort Barrancas, Fla.

The Marine Corps Team from Parris Island, S. C.

The 8th Infantry, Fort Screven, Ga., and Fort Moultrie, S. C.

In addition to the actual competitors, many visitors came to the tournament from all parts of the country. Team captains, coaches and attendants, some bringing their families, came to not only participate in the tournament, but also to enjoy Georgia's playground, the wonderful summer resort of Tybee, located on the same island with Fort Screven. The weather conditions were ideal. It seemed as though the requisition for good weather could not have been better fulfilled.

Many of the matches were held under the auspices of the National Rifle Association and carried with them the official National Rifle Association medals and recognition.

Trophies were furnished by individuals and firms and added greatly to the interest taken in the tournament.

In addition to the N. R. A. awards, the following trophies were donated and placed in competition:

The Hagood Trophy—The gift of Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, U. S. A., commanding the 4th Corps Area. To be awarded to the winning team in the Southeastern Championship Rifle Team Match.

The Leitch Trophy—Donated by Brig. Gen. Joseph D. Leitch, U. S. A., commanding the 8th Infantry Brigade of the 4th Division. To be awarded to the winning team in the Regimental Championship Rifle Team Match.

The Burt Cup—Presented by Col. Reynolds J. Burt, commanding the 8th U. S. Infantry. To be awarded to the winner of the Military Individual Championship Match.

The Travis Trophy—The gift of Brig. Gen. Robert J. Travis, National Guard of Georgia. To be awarded to the winner of the Southeastern Individual Championship Match.

The Adjutant Generals Trophy—Presented by joint donation of the Adjutant General of the eight states in the 4th Corps Area, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee. To be awarded the winning team in the Adjutant General Match.

The Day Trophy—Presented by Mr. Chas. G. Day, general manager of the Savannah Hotel and the De Soto Hotel, both of Savannah, Ga. To be awarded to the winner of the Long Range Match.

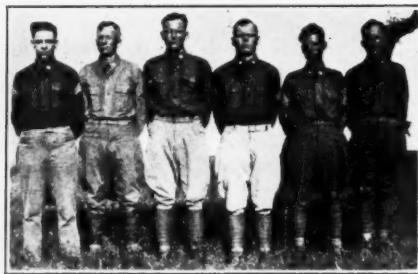

The Review Trophy—Presented by the Review Publishing and Printing Company of Savannah, Ga. To be awarded to the winner of the N. R. A. 200-yard Any-Rifle Match.

The trophies will be held by the winners until such time as they shall be called in to be competed for again.

There also was a liberal distribution of prize money received from entrance fees. Under the rules, 50 per cent of the entrance cent of entrance fees were returned to competitors. In the Fort Screven matches proper all money except that used for expenses was made available for prize awards.

The closing exercises held on Friday, August 27, 1926, were attended by hundreds of people. At this time the trophies were presented by their donors. Col. Reynolds J. Burt outlined the progress of the shoot from its conception to its successful conclusion. Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, commanding 4th Corps Area, was present and stated that he hoped that the idea of departmental meets would grow and that the Southeastern Rifle and Pistol Tournament would be larger and better each year. Brig. Gen. Harry Lee of the United States Marine Corps was also in attendance at the shoot.

One world record was established and many excellent scores turned in in different events which compare favorably with National Rifle Association scores, and in some matches even better.

Every one who attended was loud in his praise of the 8th Infantry and the way in which the tournament was conducted. Living conditions and the mess were highly satisfactory. Kindly and considerate treatment of all assure a loyal crowd of boosters for next year's tournament.

The program in detail follows with explanatory remarks and winners. The three outstanding matches which were hotly and closely contested were:

The Civilian Club Member Match.

The Adjutant General's Trophy Match.

The Southeastern Championship Match.

It is interesting to know that the team of Savannah Rifle Association was composed of men over 48 years of age. One contestant, Mr. Harry Blun, of Savannah, fired on the old team which went to Sea Girt in 1898 and 1899. He is a most remarkable shot and still in the running.

Sixth Corps Area Shoot a Success

By C. E. Nordhus

AS soon as it was definitely learned that the annual trip to Camp Perry had been called off as a result of the Government's "economy" (?) policy, the executive committee of the Illinois State Rifle Association planned to substitute their annual state shoot for those held at Perry, so that those unable to journey to Sea Girt could compete in a real match.

Maj. F. W. Parker, a director of the N. R. A., was asked to secure a few of the N. R. A. matches for us, which he gladly arranged with the powers that be, in Washington. The next step was to secure the staging of the match by the U. S. Army, since they run the National Matches with satisfaction guaranteed to all competitors. This proved a little more difficult to arrange, since the summer training period at Fort Sheridan had been a very arduous one, and all officers and men fed up on duty and Sunday reveille at 6:00 A. M. By agreeing to pass up the customary cash money prizes to competitors in the N. R. A. matches, a la Perry, and passing out the surplus cash derived from the entries to the soldiers who operated the targets and performed the various other tasks incident to the match, we were able to run the matches on schedule.

The first thoughts along these lines were to finish the matches in August, thus giving the shooters a chance to get into trim for Sea Girt, but due to the C. M. T. C. camp of over two thousand students at Fort Sheridan remaining until September 1, and being trained by the officers whom we hoped would run the shoot, we found that plan impossible. The matches therefore were shot from September 4 to 6.

General Graves, commanding the 6th C. A., and General Lenihan, commanding Fort Sheridan, lent their hearty support to planning and ordering the shoot, and Col. Hopkins was appointed to co-ordinate the efforts of the Army, Navy, N. G. and civilians in securing the entries and organizing it. He soon had the match conditions published and distributed and we were on the way.

Under the very able direction of Lieut. R. H. Larkins, 2nd Infantry, the range had been leveled off and an additional 19 targets installed, bringing the total up to 40, available at all ranges up to 1,000 yards. No V-ring targets were available for sale by the D. C. M. or any one else, so Lt. Larkins' pit detail had to paste up targets and stencil V-rings on them.

Maj. J. C. Hatie, 2nd Inf., had been appointed executive officer of the shoot, and with the assistance of Captains T. W. Ligon and B. M. Barnes and Lieutenants C. E. Steele and G. W. Kinkema, Pheris, Raddant, Stubbler, Evans, Traynor and Wetzel as pit officers, he treated us to the best match held at that range since the war. With the exception of a little trouble encountered in marking the very wet targets, everything ran off smoothly.

The programs stipulated National Match conditions and we surely had 'em—hip boots and slickers were in order on Saturday and Sunday, and even on Monday old J. Pluvius hovered over the woods behind the railroad tracks, ready to sneak up on us at any moment. To those who had occupied tents between commercial row and the mess hall at Perry, the company streets in the camp for competitors on the parade ground presented a familiar scene. The shooters were fairly comfortable, however, since Lieut. Westlund, the supply officer, had issued four blankets, etc., to each competitor and the chilly nights were easily passed in slumber with the rain pattering on the tents.

One of the principal requirements of such a match is good food and a place to eat it. These were provided by Mr. Nichols, of the Post Exchange Restaurant, to the entire satisfaction of the competitors. Those who had attended previous shoots of the I. S. R. A. were glad of the arrangement.

With such well-known shooters as Col. Stodder, former D. C. M. and now Inspector General of the 6th C. A., Col. Middleton of Culver, Lieut. B. C. Hill, winner of last year's President's Match, Steve Monahan, and the irrepressible "Last Man" Felt, and Lt. Col. M. G. Browne and his Illinois N. G. team on the firing line, the Wrigley Trophy Match started off at 9:30. When the 600-yard stage commenced old Pluvius turned on the water, and the weather man sent in a big fog from the lake to add interest (and profanity) to the match. Elbow holes became miniature lakes, and scores that appeared quite respectable at 200 went to the place where all good scores go when the markers indicate the shot values with red banners. This continued until noon, when firing ceased.

At 1 o'clock the 600-yard Any Rifle Match was fired and, in spite of the very low visibility, Col. Stodder rang up a possible with eighteen V's, winning the match. It was a well-deserved victory, and made the already popular Colonel still more well liked. Had it not been for his untiring efforts at C. A. Headquarters and his generous loan of part of the fund which had to be posted to protect the supply officer against possible loss of equipment, it is doubtful if the matches would have been held. Another old-timer who is a real veteran of the game finished third with a possible and 14 V's. He is D. S. Seymour of Oak Park, Ill., and has long since discontinued adding a year to his age on each birthday anniversary. By our accepted system of computing ages he is past 67, but still trims the youngster in matches quite frequently.

The Wrigley Match was finished with the Army sitting on top of the heap, and this same Army grabbed off most of the honors throughout. Representing an organization that usually gets old worn rifles and war-time ammunition for its limited practice, they surely did themselves credit, and far exceeded (our) expectations. If they can be induced to compete in all our matches next summer, competition will surely be keen, and real scores required to win. With the excellent range facilities at Fort Sheridan very attractive matches can be held all summer and a gang of pot-hunters sent to Perry that will make the Marines hustle.

The match, like previous Illinois matches, was rushed through at the last minute, and the writer mailed out programs to all Middle West shooters whose addresses were known, hoping to get most of the entries by mail before September 4. These failed to materialize, and the evening before the match Lieut. Kellotat, the statistical officer, and his assistants received enough entries to keep them busy filling out squadding cards until 4:00 A. M. Saturday. As at Perry, their office was a very busy place at all hours.

The civilian riflemen of the state are very glad of the results as a whole, for without the Army's help we'd only have had the customary two-day shoot with forty or fifty entries, and all hands are looking forward to the next season's matches.

West Bend Iowa Tournament

By Emil Berg

UNDER cloudy and rainy conditions the two-day tournament of the West Bend Club was held September 4 and 5. These two days were not only rainy and dark, but the temperature had suddenly dropped from summer weather to chilly fall temperature. No doubt, owing to this condition, quite a number of riflemen, who could reach the town by automobile, did not dare make the trip via automobile, as Iowa roads, they know, are the worst in the United States and the black mud swallows up the wheels to the hubs. However, they all seemed to have a glorious time and plenty elbow room. The range was 200 yards and all shooting was off-hand, with permission to use any rifle, trigger and sights. The outstanding performance was the marvelous 5-shot score of Nick Altman. He started with a 23, then a 24, and his third was the center, a 25. This looked good and attracted some attention, especially since the fourth shot was again a 25. Now, it focused all eyes upon the marksman as he entered the stand for his finish. He held the rifle as steady as before and when he announced the shot as being "a good one" and the marker again signalled with the United States flag another 25, making the total 122, all united in congratulating the lucky shooter on this marvelous achievement. Think of it: the first two shots in a 4½-inch circle and the next three in a 1½-inch spot.

Another fine score was made by J. Dorweiler in 10 shots, only one entry. Every shot was 20 and better, making the high total of 226 points. Cris Jansen, as usual, was strong on the People's target, scoring a 74 out of 75, as follows: 24, 25, 25. The winners of the various targets can be seen herewith:

On the third day, Labor Day, the annual

In commenting on this score the writer has concluded that Mr. Westergaard is the second Dr. Hudson in as much as year after year for at least fifteen years he has either won the championship or has been next to it. I have studied the man at West Bend, shooting at the stand next to his, and it was as near clock-work as anything could be. Every shot was delivered the same way—no fuss—only an imitation of a petrified human, and then the report of the rifle, with the almost inevitable result of a shot well in the black. I doubt if there is any one in the whole world who could beat Westergaard six times in ten matches.

Another very commendable score in the 100-shot match was made by a new man in the Schuetzen arena and that was the renowned military man, A. K. Friedrich, of Ames, Iowa. He used a Springfield rifle, equipped with telescope and set trigger and a heavy reload. The crack was almost deafening compared to the .32-40 Schuetzen rifles. Mr. Friedrich shot the fine score of 2135 and won third place.

For a while there was great consternation among the riflemen owing to the supply of Schuetzen smokeless powder running out, but Mr. Jansen anticipated this condition, and having quite a supply of this powder in his possession, was enabled to fill the demand.

It did not seem to be generally known that the duPont people have decided to discontinue the manufacture of this substitute for black powder and also have discontinued the manufacture of duPont Rifle No. 1, which some of the shooters were formerly using.

This is a deplorable state of affairs, as there is no powder that will give as good results in every way, as these two powders did, where riflemen shot the Schuetzen rifles in which they could use shells that they reloaded many times, and which made reloading very economical.

The only relief the duPont Company had to offer was to advise this class of riflemen to return to the use of the old-style black rifle powder. Personally I think many will return to the use of semi-smokeless made by King's Powder Mills, which was used universally by the shooters of Pope barrels, before the smokeless powders were perfected to shoot equally as well.

As the season is drawing to a close we do not anticipate much more shooting this year, but we certainly aim to make next year, in which we will hold the 16th biennial tournament of the Central Sharpshooters' Union a lively one.

We shall strive to make 'em all up, and will offer a program that will certainly be worth while coming to Davenport for.

White Tailed Deer

("White Tailed Deer," by Wm. M. Newsom. For sale by American Rifleman Book Dept., $3.00)

"WHITE TAILED DEER" is a well written and an exceedingly practical work on the hunting, tracking, habits, and natural history of our common Virginia deer, more particularly pertaining to the northeastern portion of the United States from Pennsylvania and Minnesota northward and eastward. The author, unlike our earlier writers, has had the great advantage of being able to consult the works of such authorities as Van Dyke and Judge Canton, as well as our own prominent field and closest naturalists who have specialized on this species. What he has to say is therefore accurate, reliable and scientific.

But, above all, Mr. Newsom has had a lifetime of experience in deer hunting. He knows, perhaps, better than any other man, the practical side of deer hunting, and he knows how to tell of it, and what important points to stress to make his work of real use to young and old hunters alike. The book is exceedingly well written and there is not a dull spot in it. I read it in my camp by candle light in two evenings when I was dog tired from miles and miles over steep, rough mountains, and it kept me awake—indeed, very much alert.

The whole of the book is good—very good; but the second chapter on still-hunting, and the fifth chapter on tracking snow are absolute masterpieces. I could imagine myself back in New Brunswick where I learned by experience most that I know of the still-hunting of deer. I could see the tracks of deer, the bushes they had nibbled, the little thickets and the open places, and the sudden flash, and then the sway and bob of the white tail as a deer was jumped.

There are other chapters covering in admirable manner the habits and life history of the deer, its anatomy particularly with relation to killing it quickly and humanely, on driving deer in Pennsylvania, on the compass and sketch map, on deer rifles which is excellent equipment, hunting knives, and, lastly, on skinning, butchering, preserving meat, and cooking recipes. The book is excellently illustrated with photographs of wild deer, hunting country, and equipment. There are many practical sketches and humorous cartoons at the end of each chapter by the author. There is but one picture of dead game in the entire book, that of a pot of venison stew!

I consider Mr. Newsom's book exceedingly practical and valuable, and I personally have learned a lot from it, and have reviewed a lot that I had almost forgotten, for it is seven years now since I have hunted the white-tail. The book might be called a modernized edition of Van Dyke's "Still Hunter," but it is better and more practical for our northeastern hunters than Van Dyke's work, which described mostly the hunting in the southwestern portion of the United States. Particularly it shows the vast difference between merely following one's guide—that is deer shooting—and real deer hunting. It is so valuable that I do not see how any hunter of the white-tailed deer can afford to do without it. It may mean all the difference between success and failure on the next hunt. The young tyro and the old-timer can alike learn a lot from it.

The Birth of the 40 Special

By C. L. Eimer

This is the Twelfth Story to be Published in the American Rifleman's $200 Prize Contest

IN the early fall of 1912, while waiting for an opening on the steel-working crew of a large new hotel under process of construction at Phoenix, Ariz., we rented a cubby-hole that was conveniently located and did a lot of gun-repairing, rebuilding and small odd-and-end work. One salubrious afternoon the door was darkened by what was almost immediately recognized to be one of the fast-vanishing tribe of "sour-dough" prospectors, who gave us a diffident "Howdy" and sat down in an out-of-the-way corner.

Presently, when the job in hand got where one could look around without forgetting something, the old prospector got up, drew and whirled a "Frontier" with that deceptive speed sometimes met with, handed the gun to us butt first, but with index finger near enough to guard to make it readily reversible by a practiced hand, and said: "What dyu reckon yu can do fur it?"

When asked to hand the gun to us with the left hand holding the barrel, he grinned, did so, offered us a drink and told the tale. Seemed like that gun ought to shoot harder, more accurately and with a flatter trajectory, so, after the barrel had been calibrated and the explanations satisfactorily made to the old man, he gave us carte blanche to go ahead and make her do her stuff right.

After a bit of looking around, a piece of very deeply-rifled .38-55 rifle barrel was found that would, when reamed out some, be just what we needed for a guide for the standard factory .41 bullet that would not only be a guide for that bullet, but was small enough to make a really gas-tight fit. Since factory-loaded ammunition only was to be used, the cylinder was shortened so's the bullet wouldn't have to jump a yard before it reached the rifling, and the barrel set back correspondingly. The old man didn't blink at the charges, which were around thirty dollars, but took the old gun out for a trial. When he returned and was asked what he'd take for the old smokestick, he grinned and said she wasn't for sale; clamped that gun outshot anything he'd used yet, and that he, for one, was plumb satisfied.

This little job stuck in our mind for years, and, when we were the boss of the Albuquerque Gun Shop, again came up for discussion and experiment. We didn't like that old .41 caliber, as it didn't have punch enough, but wanted an entirely new cartridge. Being the years 1915, 1916 and 1917 then, it was impossible to get any factory to even dream of putting out a new shell for us, so we let it ride for the time being, but worried and figured into the small hours of many a winter night. The .40 caliber subject was sporadically brought up when we went to California in 1918, but other business came in the way and we left California and homesteaded in New Mexico. Getting housed and trying to show the Land Office we were bona fide settlers kept us busy until last year, when the .40 caliber bug bit so hard it couldn't be ignored.

We wore out a lot of good paper and pencils and early this year got together a mess of chambering-reamers, had cases made, ruined a few perfectly good cylinders for Frontier Colts, but got somewhere. Being somewhat of a dumbbell about a lot of things, and consequently stubborn, we wanted an

The case is straight on outside, has room for 25 grains of Fg black powder, which is quite coarse, and uses a 200-grain bullet, normally ".403" in diameter. With this 200-grain bullet ahead of nine grains weight of duPont pistol powder No. 3, the velocity is greater than .38-40 factory loads and recoil no heavier, though we use regularly the 200-grain bullet and eight grains No. 3. Factory .38-40's used were smokeless, as we have no use for soft-coal in our hand-guns. We aim to design one or two other bullets for this case, but are a lot pleased with her as she is.

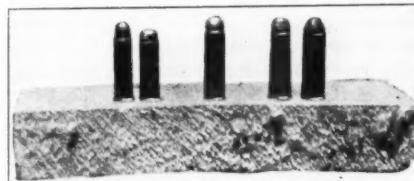

The pretty part of the whole thing is that any S. A. or Bisley in .41 or .38-40 can have a .40 Special cylinder fitted at nominal cost, as the .40 Special's bullet is .403-inch in diameter and the few .41 barrels we have calibrated were an even .400-inch and the .38-40's were from .404-inch to .406-inch. The Army Special in .41 can be rechambered to use this .40 Special if the bullet is set back a bit in the shell or the shell shortened slightly, but the .40 Special was intended for use in the Frontier.

When the .40 Special was developed enough to use, we had to have a different six-gun to go with it, as the regular S. A. or Bisley didn't fit our paw well enough. The picture shows the first model made up, though the grips look bad, as they were hurriedly whittled and rasped out of a butt-cut of a cedar fence-post. Since the S. A. hammer was too high for quick getting-at and also loosened grip of hand when thumb reached for that high hammer-comb, and the regular grips let our hand slip up too close under hammer when in a hurry, we built up what we thought we had to have by putting a hump in the Bisley grip and using the Bisley frame and hammer.

Another model using the regular S. A. Army Colt is under way, and it will be similar to the one shown, but won't require so many extra parts. Most of our shooting is at jack rabbits at around 100 yards, and the .38-40 was used until this new .40 Special was developed.

The .40 Special seems to get there quicker and have a flatter trajectory than the .38-40, which, with less recoil, pleases us a lot.

For target-shooting a heavier bullet will be used, though most of our targets are the aforementioned jack rabbits. For the outdoorsman this .40 Special has it on 'em all, as reloading with this straight shell is a picnic compared to reloading .38-40's, and the speed and smash of the 200-grain bullet are most desirable advantages. We can easily get more speed by lightening the bullet, but 200 grains is as light as we care to shoot, since we want weight of bullet for smash and penetration. We waited a long time for our widow, but we have her, and she's fair, fat and FORTY!

Eimer's .40. (Center).

The six-gun "as is."

As Eimer Likes it.

"honest to Grandma" .40, not a .36 parading as a .38 or a .42 parading as a .44, but a full and fat forty.

Otherwise, the rim, or that part which keeps case from slipping far into chamber, has as much head as the old .41 Colt shell.

N. R. A. Meetings Held at Sea Girt

By L. Q. Bradley

TWO important National Rifle Association meetings were held during the progress of the matches at Sea Girt. The first, a special meeting of the Board of Directors, considered and adopted an almost complete redraft of the by-laws of the Association. This redraft was made in order to clear up many ambiguities which had crept into the old by-laws through various amendments, and was also made with a viewpoint to adopting a set of by-laws which would be modern in every respect and would be suitable for adoption if it were decided to reincorporate the Association in some state where the provisions for the meetings of members and directors would be more flexible than is true of the New York Corporation Law. The by-laws as amended are being printed and will be available for distribution to all interested members within a short time. The more important changes provide that the Executive Committee may fix the annual dues instead of having the dues fixed in the by-laws. This change was made with the idea that the AMERICAN RIFELMAN should be sent to all members of the association as soon as finances permit. In carrying out this plan it may appear to be advisable to set the annual dues at three dollars per year, one dollar of which will be applied to the magazine subscription.

Another change was the creation of the office of Executive Vice-President, this Vice-President to be paid a salary and to be the Executive Officer of the Association and to maintain the necessary liaison with the War Department, the various state officials and Congress.

Following the adoption of the redrafted by-laws, Gen. Reckord, the present Secretary of the N. R. A., was elected to the office of Executive Vice-President, and C. B. Lister, the present Assistant Secretary, was elected to the office of Secretary.

The Board elected as Honorary Vice-President Col. William Libbey of Princeton, N. J., a former President of the National Rifle Association and for many years one of the foremost friends of the shooting game in this country.

The Directors heard the report of a special committee, which had been appointed to investigate the advisability of reincorporation for the Association. The report recommended that such reincorporation be undertaken in order that the affairs of the Association might be conducted in an entirely legal and business-like manner.

The following evening, Saturday, September 11, the annual meeting of the members of the Association was held. For the first time in several years, all members of the Association, annual as well as life, were invited to attend the meeting, with the understanding that all members might be heard in discussion, but that only life members were eligible to vote. There were 55 life members and probably 75 annual members present. Col. Waterbury, the President of the Association, made a brief report indicating that the annual membership of the Association was at approximately the same figure as last year, but that the club enrollment had materially increased, while the number of entries in the various competitions conducted by the Association had grown to new high records.

Gen. Reckord called the attention of the meeting to the urgent necessity of an organized effort to stage the National Matches in 1927. He pointed out the splendid cooperation which the Marine Corps had rendered this year in making possible matches of some description and compared this cooperation with the "thumbs-down" policy of some sections of the War Department.

The Association then received from the hands of Col. Libbey, on behalf of the Society of Sons of the American Revolution, a handsome silver trophy cup to be awarded annually hereafter for intercollegiate competition.

The members then elected the following twenty directors, who will serve for a term of three years:

Maj. L. W. T. Waller, Jr., U. S. M. C. Res.

GEN. SPENCER HEADS I. A. R.

THE annual meeting of the Association of International American Riflemen was held at the club house of the New Jersey State Rifle Association, Sea Girt, N. J., on Saturday, September 4. The following officers were elected: Brig. Gen. Bird W. Spencer of New Jersey, President; Maj. K. K. V. Casey of Delaware, Vice-President; Col. Wm. A. Tewes of New Jersey, Secretary and Treasurer; Col. Wm. Libbey of New Jersey, Historian.

It was decided to hold a dinner in Washington at about the time of the meeting of the National Rifle Association in February. A committee consisting of Maj. Frank E. Evans, Maj. Littleton, W. T. Waller and Capt. George Corwin was appointed to make arrangements for the dinner.

The question of admitting the Small-bore International Shooters into the association was discussed and a committee was appointed to recommend a revision of the by-laws to accomplish this. This committee was Maj. Casey, Col. Libbey and Gen. Spencer.

A modification of the rules of the North America Match was suggested and a committee was appointed with power to change the rules of the match to meet the conditions suggested by some of the foreign teams. This committee consists of Maj. Casey and Gen. Spencer.

Capt. G. L. Wotkyns, Ord. Dept., U. S. A.
Maj. C. H. Wilson, Fla. N. G.

Maj. Gen. Q. A. Gillmore, N. J. N. G.
Brig. Gen. G. A. White, Adj. Gen. of Ore.
Brig. Gen. E. C. Shannon, Pa. N. G.
Mr. Frank Maloney.

Lt. Col. Frank M. Rumbold, Adj. Gen. of Missouri.

Commander A. D. Denney, U. S. Navy.
Dr. Irving R. Caulkins.

Brig. Gen. J. Van B. Metts, Adjutant General of North Carolina.

Lt. Col. D. C. McDougal, U. S. Marine Corps.

A great many favorable comments were heard relative to the new policy of admitting annual members to the meeting, and it is to be anticipated that if the National Matches are held next year the members' meeting will be a truly representative gathering of the riflemen of this country.

Some Early Smith and Wessons

By Henry Walter Fry

THE caliber was .44, so called, though both it and its successor, the Russian Model, were actually more nearly .43 caliber, the diameter of the bullet being .429. How was that caliber arrived at? Well, I think it came about in this way. The old so-called .44 cap-and-ball revolvers were really about .45 caliber. When some of them were altered to take metallic cartridges there was not metal enough in the cylinders to allow of their being bored out to take shells of .45 caliber inside as can be seen by looking at the cylinder of any .44 caliber cap-and-ball Colt. So the chambers kept their original bore, .45, and a cartridge, the now obsolete .44 Colt, was made, of an inside diameter of .43, taking a bullet with a heel at the base .43 diameter, fitting into the shell and the forward part .446 diameter, to make the rifling of the barrel. The bullets for the cap-and-ball revolvers were made in the same way with a heel to enter the chamber when loading and a larger forward part fitting tightly into it when rammed home with the loading lever. And the first cap and ball revolver bullets had no provision at all for lubricant, so that after a few shots with them the barrel became so foul that accurate shooting was impossible. The bullets for the .44 Colt cartridge had no provision on them for lubricant either, so a beeswax lubricating wad was placed between powder and bullet. It is the only American cartridge I know of that has its lubricant placed that way, though certain English small rook and rabbit rifle cartridges have a beeswax wad between powder and bullet. The old English long range muzzle-loading rifles, which have never been beaten for accuracy, were loaded with a thick wad of felt soaked with beeswax behind the bullet. But this is wandering somewhat from our subject.

Anyway, the first Smith & Wesson .44 revolver took a bullet of the same diameter as the inside of the shell of the cartridge of the converted cap-and-ball revolvers. Curiously enough the .44 American Model cartridge was made with a heel bullet too. The inside of the shell was .419, almost .42, while the forward part of the bullet taking the rifling was about .43 in diameter, the size of the outside of the shell. Consequently the chambers of the American Model are bored straight through.

The load for the .44 American Model cartridge, which is still listed by the various ammunition companies, is 25 grains black powder and a 205-grain bullet. Of its accuracy I can not say, never having had a chance to try it out. In his book, "Modern American Pistols and Revolvers," the author, Mr. A. C. Gould, says, "The old American Model Smith & Wesson revolver was a great favorite with those who knew what weapon to select for reliable work. Many are in use today (this was written in 1894) and are highly valued as very accurate weapons." Well, I doubt whether many of the American Model are being used at the present time with the original cartridge.

The principal defect of the American Model which it shares in full with the Bisley Model Colt and in a lesser degree with all American revolvers of modern design, is that its handle turns too sharply downwards, which tends to throw the first finger up to the top instead of down to the bottom of the trigger. It has that fine, graceful outline which distinguishes all the Smith & Wesson productions and its appearance would have in my opinion have been improved by giving the handle a more backward sloping curve as shown in the dotted lines on the accompanying sketch.

But for all that the American Model was a very fine weapon, and that the fact has been appreciated by revolver enthusiasts is shown by the fact that numbers have in the past been sent in to the Smith & Wesson factory to have their cylinders re-chambered for the more up-to-date Russian Model cartridge, and the last time I was at the Springfield factory they told me that every now and again a stray one comes in to have this alteration made to it.

The Russian Model

Now we come to the most celebrated of all the Smith & Wesson revolvers, the famous Russian Model, now alas, no longer manufactured. It was so called because it was the weapon made for the great Russian contract for the cavalry of the army of the Czar, which took from the year 1870 to the year 1874 to complete. There were in all 200,000 revolvers supplied under the contract and allowing 300 working days in the year were turned out at the rate of 175 completed revolvers per day or a complete revolver every $2\frac{3}{4}$ minutes for a working day of eight hours. Some production, I'll tell the world.

The Turkish Model

Besides the .44 central fire model supplied to the Russian Government, there was also made a very small number, not more than about 5,400, of the same pattern for the Turkish government, but chambered for the .44 rim fire cartridge used in the Henry and Model 1866 Winchester repeaters. This cartridge is now quite obsolete and in fact no longer listed by all the ammunition companies. It had a load of 26 grains of black powder and a 200-grain, flat-ended lead bullet, and so far as power goes was much more suited to a revolver than to a rifle. Beside the different chambering that it needed the nose of the hammer had to be altered to make it strike the rim instead of the center of the shell.

This Turkish Model, as it was called, is practically unknown in this country, the whole of the consignment having been shipped to the Near East, where stray specimens are still occasionally to be met with. A friend and correspondent, now living in North Africa bought two of them in Salonika during the War. All the inscriptions on the Turkish Model were in the Turkish language.

The original Russian Model was, like its predecessor, the American, a six-shot, single action revolver of the break-open pattern with lift-up locking catch and automatic extractor, fitted with a very good handle with wooden grips of what is known as the saw-handle pattern, that is to say with the rear upper part curving back into the hand between the thumb and first finger, a very good arrangement when only light loads are used, but apt to raise a sore place on the inside of the thumb on the recoil from a heavy charge, as any one who has ever fired full charge .44 or .45 ammunition from either a single shot Remington or the old Colt double action Army revolver can testify. In the later pattern of the Russian Model this feature was almost eliminated. There was also a finger spur on the trigger guard, a thing which is preferred for target pistols by many European marksmen, but which finds little favor in this country and is hardly suited to a military weapon, carried, as the Russian Model must have been, in a saddle holster.

The barrel length of the revolvers supplied to Russia was $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches and was of exactly the same bore as that of the American Model. I once had occasion to make a personal test of this. My old Ideal Handbook gives the diameter of the American Model bullet as .419 and that of the Russian Model as .429. So naturally I thought that the American barrel must be smaller in bore than that of the Russian Model and raised the question with the Smith & Wesson people when on a visit to their factory. They assured me that both were bored exactly alike, showed me the printed dimensions and more than this brought out brand new specimens of each model and a barrel gauge and invited me to try it. I did so and found it an exact fit in both. Question settled for good, one doubting Thomas converted.

The cartridge for the Russian Model differed from that for the American Model in having 23 grains of powder instead of 25 and in having the bullet increased from 205 grains to 246. It was of the same diameter as the American Model bullet, .429, and the shell was of this diameter inside. Consequently it was two thicknesses of metal larger than the American shell and it is quite an easy matter to re-chamber an American Model cylinder to take the Russian Model shell, and in many cases this has been done for men who wanted an old favorite American Model brought up to date. As I said before, even now a stray American Model is sent in to the Springfield factory to have this alteration made to it.

The target shooters of this country were not long in finding out the accuracy of the new Russian cartridge and of course the revolver for which it was designed. It became their favorite revolver for 50-yard target work, and one of them, Mr. W. W. Bennett, in the presence of witnesses, put up the astonishing score of 914 out of a possible 1,000 at that range, offhand, or more than an average of 9s. And the 9 ring at 50 yards is just about 5½ inches across. This is really marvelous work for a weapon with only a 6½-inch barrel and speaks volumes for the quality of revolver, ammunition and man. In the new Russian Model this was almost eliminated, and the finger spur on the trigger guard taken off, and these were real improvements. So also was the cutting away of the saw handle hump at the back of the grip. I'm afraid I can't say as much for the rest of the alterations to the handle, the substitution of rubber grips for the original wooden ones and the making of the upper part smaller in bulk. Well, maybe the handle suits many men's hands, I only know I find it too small for mine, which happens to be a very long-fingered one, so I won't say anything more about it.

Altogether the Russian Model was an exceedingly fine gun and it was so much liked that the makers not only bored and chambered it for the .44-23-246 cartridge but for the .44-40-200 and .38-40-180 Winchester as well. At Mr. Walter Winans' request they bored and chambered it for the .45-13-250 Eley revolver cartridge for the use of himself and others on the revolver ranges at Bisley. But though I went to Bisley a good many times when at home, I never saw anyone else but Winans use a Smith & Wesson there. For some reason, possibly because there was no Smith & Wesson tent there, everybody else used either the Colt or the Webbley, and of the two I think the American weapon was the favorite.

For some of the target shots of this country the Russian Model was also chambered for two special cartridges, the .38-44 and the .32-44. The .38-44 had a long straight shell, coming flush at the muzzle with the muzzle of the cylinder. It was loaded with 23 grains of black powder and a bullet of .360 diameter and a weight of 146 grains. At least that is the weight given in the Ideal Handbook, but the bullet cast in my Ideal mold weighs 153 grains. It has given me some very fine six-point rest groups from my ten-inch Remington single shot pistol and in the Russian Model revolver in the hands of Mr. F. E. Bennett, the brother of Mr. W. W. Bennett, made a 100-shot score of 878 out of 1,000. But though very accurate the .38-44 was a very dirty shooting cartridge with black powder and fouled the barrel badly after a very few shots as I know from practical experience with it in a friend's revolver in Australia.

The other special cartridge was the .32-44, which also had a long, straight shell, into which the bullet was sunk with its point flush with the muzzle. It had a load of 11 grains of black powder and a special bullet of .323 diameter and of 83 grains' weight. Of course a heavy revolver such as this, of so small a caliber and firing so light a load was a target weapon pure and simple. I myself have never been able to take the .32 caliber seriously as one for revolvers. It may be all right for a pocket arm, but even in that the .38 or .41 caliber is more effective while if a man needs a small caliber cartridge for target work the .22 long rifle in a ten-inch pistol is the best to use and the cheapest, too. Neither the .32-44 nor the .38-44 were very generally used by target shots and are both obsolete, the .38 Special having taken the place of the .38-44, while if a man wants a .32-caliber heavy revolver he can get one chambered for the .32-20.

The Russian Model was supplied in most calibers with barrels 4, 5, 6, and 6½ inches long and with an 8-inch barrel for the .44 Russian cartridge only. That would be for target work, but as a matter of fact I believe most of the experts preferred the 6½-inch in preference to the 7½-inch length.

I always thought it a very great pity that the making of the Russian Model was discontinued. I believe the ostensible reason was that the locking catch was not strong enough to stand the extra strain now and then developed by the full charge of smokeless powder load. That, however, could easily have been remedied by the addition of an extra central locking catch such as was fitted to the .38 caliber five-shot double action Perfected Model pocket revolver and a new lease of life given to a fine weapon to which the target shots of the country have become thoroughly accustomed. In my opinion it was a golden opportunity lost. Another golden opportunity which the Springfield firm had of a ten-inch .22 single shot barrel to the Russian Model action and frame. What a splendid single shot pistol that would have made! Far better than the one they did make, though that was very good, when they put the long single shot barrel on to the frame and action of the 1891 Model pocket revolver, of which I shall speak later on. No extra handle, such as they had to make for the smaller action, would have been needed, for the Russian Model already had a very good handle, although not in my opinion, as good as it might have been. Then a man owning a Russian Model revolver and wanting a long-barreled, small bore single shot pistol for target work at little cost, would merely have had to get one of the ten-inch barrels and fit it on his frame and action in a few minutes.

What a fine target arm the New Russian Model would have made when bored and chambered for the .38 Special with the weight and balance made right by having the barrel of a somewhat smaller outside diameter and the cylinder deeply fluted to further reduce the weight and also fitted with the extra central locking catch. The contemplation of these two lost possibilities in the way of fine single hand guns is enough to make a revolver enthusiast feel quite melancholy, "to make a vessel's heart bleed," as that celebrated theologian, the Reverend Mr. Stiggins, once put it.

Besides the single action Russian Model the Springfield factory put out another built on the same lines but made double instead of single action, with barrels from 4 to 6½ inches and chambered for either the .44-23-

246, the .44-40-200 W. C. F. or the .38-40-180 W. C. F. cartridges. But for some reason it never was accorded anything like the favor that the single action model received or achieved even a tithe of its popularity. Myself, I think the reason to be that the real revolver expert, the man who does know what a revolver is, will always take a single action in preference to a double action, and with the known and proved popularity of the single action in the past I for one cannot understand why it is that the factories at the present time will persist in fitting all their models with the double action, the trigger cocking part of which is practically never used by anyone, and in discarding the proved and popular single actions.

To tell the truth the American revolver makers have never been entirely successful in the design of their double actions. None of them has succeeded in making one with the short, smooth, easy pull which is so conspicuous a merit of the big English Webbleys, all the American double actions that I have ever handled having a long, stiff draggy pull to the trigger cocking part of them. It would seem as if the double action, which was a kind of after-thought in the American revolver making industry, did not flourish kindly on American soil. In the early days, when revolvers were made for serious business, all American pistols were made single action, or practically all, whereas on the other side of the water the revolver makers of the old country put trigger cocking actions into their weapons, many of which were made to cock and fire with the trigger only as the modern hammerless is. The rather curious result of this is that the English makers attained a pre-eminence in the making of the double action which their American brethren have never been able to reach, while the finest products in the six-shooter line on this side of the Atlantic have all been single action.

A Hunting Battery

By Townsend Whelen

I WILL be very thankful if you will answer the following questions about selecting a battery of rifles for hunting in Alaska, the Rockies and the eastern U. S.

1. A friend has two rifles for sale at $100 each that seem to fill my needs. They are a .256 Newton, barrel 22 inches long fitted to a Springfield action on a sporter stock with high comb, Zeiss, Ziemi 2½ power telescope sight. Noske Special mount, and the gun has open sights, sling and weighs 7½ pounds loaded. Gun number two is a .30-06 Springfield sporter with high comb stock, Hensoldt, Ziel-Dialyt 2½ power telescope sight and Noske mike windage mount, sling, open sights, recoil pad and cheek pad and weighs 9 pounds loaded. These guns have been shot about 100 times each and both have barrels as good as when new. Do you think I could find two better rifles than these two for American big game? The stocks fit me and I like the way these guns feel. However, I'm left-handed and I can have a left-handed action fitted to both guns. That is one reason I want these two rifles.

2. What do you think of my buying both guns, hunting small game, deer, black bear and similar game with the .256 and moose, elk and everything larger with the .30-06? Would the little gun stop a moose or grizzly if I was to see one or if one should charge?

3. How about the .256 for a woods loafer's rifle. Is either rifle hard to keep clean?

4. Can you give me Warren Hasting Miller's address?

5. Where can I buy gunsmithing tools, books and is there a company that sells repairs for all makes of guns? I would like to have their addresses.—C. B.

Answer (by Lt. Col. Whelen). I have your letter of July 10th. I should think that either of those rifles you mention would be most excellent for you to buy. I think, however, that the .30-06 sporter Springfield would be found much the more accurate and all around useful rifle. You cannot get a much better rifle than that. I am not so sure of the accuracy of the .256. Some of these rifles are very accurate, and others not quite what they should be.

The only trouble with the .256 as a "Woods Loafer's" rifle is that I do not know of any full jacketed, pointed bullet in this caliber for use on small game with a reduced powder charge.

Neither rifle is at all difficult to keep in perfect condition provided that proper methods of cleaning are used. I am inclosing a small pamphlet on this subject.

I do not have Mr. Warren H. Miller's address, but I think that you can get it by writing to the Editor, Field and Stream, 45 West 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

I am afraid, also, that I cannot tell you of anyone making gunsmithing tools. Such tools are usually made by the gunsmith himself, or else some tool obtained in the hardware store is used. See the book "Amateur Gunsmithing," which tells how to make the necessary tools, and what they are.

ON RELOADING, ETC.

I WOULD like to know how cheaply the .45 A. C. P. can be hand loaded? Can it be loaded cheaper than the 3 cents apiece which the D. C. M. now charges for it?

I also have a 32-20 Colt Army Special on which I would like to know about reloading. Which would be the most practical to cast the bullets or buy them with nickel jackets?

How would black powder do for reloading the 32-20 for practice work and what grade should I use? I like to shoot both the revolver and the .45, but the 3c and 3½¢ apiece takes the joy out of life.

Could a person practice with a .22 caliber pistol or revolver until he had obtained a fair degree of accuracy and then change to the heavier caliber? The only thing I can see in the .22 caliber is its cheapness in ammunition which is practically nothing.

How light can the trigger pull be made on the .45 A. C. P. without the hammer following the slide?—C. V. B. J.

Answer (by Maj. Hatcher). Even if you buy jacketed bullets you can reload the .45 A. C. P. cartridges cheaper than the price charged by the D. C. M. If you use lead bullets you can do it for less than half; this does not include the original cost of the reloading tools.

For your .32-20, I would advise cast bullets. Lead bullets are preferable in a revolver, though there is a little more accuracy in jacketed bullets in this caliber.

You can use black powder, about 15 grains of F. F. G., but you will have more satisfaction with a smokeless powder. With the 115 grain bullet, a good load is eleven (11.0) grains of DuPont No. 80.

You can practice with a .22 caliber pistol and revolver and change to a larger caliber and you will find that the .22 has taught you how to shoot. Very excellent accuracy can be obtained in this way with very little shooting of large calibers. Some large caliber shooting must be done, however, to accustom the shooter to the recoil.

The trigger pull of the .45 automatic can be brought down to about 4½ lbs. without having the hammer follow the slide down, which it will do with a very light pull.

You can get a lot of good information on reloading by getting the catalogs and handbooks from the various companies making reloading tools.

REBORING FOR SCATTERING

I HAVE a rifle that I will describe to you as follows:

About .42 cal., using a copper rim fire cartridge that measures 5/16" dia. across the rim, 17-32 inch diameter just in front of the rim, length over-all including the lead patched bullet, 2 3-16 inches.

Bolt Action.

Shell ejects on top.

Magazine holds I believe, about a dozen or sixteen cartridges, never tried it out, and extends up towards the muzzle of the gun just under the barrel, in the forearm, which extends full length of the barrel, and loads on the right side just under where the cartridge ejects from the gun when empty.

Barrel is 33" long, 23/32" outside dia. at the muzzle, from trigger to center of stock, butt measures 12½", overall length of gun 52".

On left side of bolt and trigger frame are the following marks:

BERN
189650
M .78

On the top of the stock towards the butt are these marks:

D1 + C1

A steel cleaning rod is carried with it at the same place where the loading rod is carried for a muzzle loading gun.

I wish to have this bored out for a Shot Gun. I believe that the rim of a 32 gauge shot gun shell will be the same size of the rim of the cartridge that now fits this gun.

I do not know exactly, I could not find either a new or old shell of 32 gauge or 28 gauge to measure.

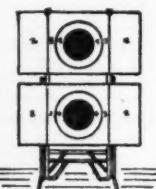

If either one of the above mentioned gauges of shotgun shells are the same size rim as the cartridge now used, can this be bored out for a shotgun and either a full choke or a modified choke shotgun be made out of this at very little cost?

The idea is not to change the bolt in the least except from a rim fire pin to a center fire pin, which can be done easily as the rim fire pin is a double pin on each side of the cartridge.

Who would be reliable gun smiths to do this work for me and what would be the approximate cost of this job?—O. G. M.

Answer (by Cap. Askins). If your rifle has or takes a straight shell of .42 caliber then the 410 gauge shotgun shell will fit the bolt. On the otherhand if the shell is the Swiss 41 rimfire, a bottle neck shell, then the .32 Winchester shotgun case will fit it. I do not know which cartridge your rifle uses. If the rifle was made for military use it takes the Swiss 41, known as the Vetterli.

Reborning should cost you about five dollars, but I do not know any gunsmiths in your section of the country. Keshkelek Brothers, Stevens Point, Wis., could probably do the work, but they are not very close to home.

SMOKELESS

Reduces recoil—increases velocity, gives closer and more even patterns

HERCO Smokeless is a special new shotgun powder for long range, heavy duck and goose loads.

Herco is absolutely different from every other shotgun or rifle powder made. It is not a copy of anything. It is not merely an improvement or a new number. It is in every way a real development destined to revolutionize your ideas of what the one best shotgun powder should be. And a patent has been applied for so that Herco Smokeless will remain exclusively a Hercules development and product.

And now what is Herco Smokeless? It contains 95% of nitrocellulose, high grade nitrated cotton, coated with a deterrent to make it completely progressive burning.

This insures low pressures, high patterns, and the ability to handle 1 $\frac{1}{4}$ and 1 $\frac{3}{8}$ ounces of shot at high speed. And it contains something else—five percent of a special quick burning substance has been chemically incorporated with the 95% nitrocellulose to make Herco burn cleanly, uniformly and certainly.

Being both progressive burning and essentially non-hygroscopic, as well as being certain and uniform in ignition, and regular in burning, Herco combines all the good properties of each type of shotgun powder previously manufactured.

It took time to develop Herco Smokeless, but we made it RIGHT!

MAGNUM RIFLES

WE ARE prepared to build Magnum Rifles in the following calibers to order in accordance with the exact specifications of our customers. We also carry in stock a few rifles of these calibers, with stock dimensions to fit the average man for immediate delivery.

.300 Magnum. This is the very best long range rifle for all American big game, and for the soft skinned game of Africa and India. It extends the range at which a good shot can put and kill game by about 100 yards over all other rifles of any caliber whatever. We recommend particularly that it be used with the 200 grain bullet which has a very heavy jacket. At the extremely heavy velocity which this rifle gives, other bullets tend to fly to pieces too much.

.350 Magnum. This, we believe to be the very best caliber for all-around work in Africa, or for Alaskan brown bear. In Africa it does superb work on antelope at long range, on lion, and even on buffalo and rhino. With it the African sportsman is adequately armed for every species of game except elephant. The 275 grain bullet has terrific punch and driving qualities and is one of the best killing bullets ever devised, besides being exceptionally accurate.

.375 Magnum. Rifles of this caliber have been extremely popular in Africa for a number of years, being ample for any game except elephant. One advantage of this caliber is that sportsmen visiting Africa can rely on replenishing ammunition there. This caliber is also becoming very popular among hunters of the larger species of American game.

Sporting Springfields. For the sportsman who does not require such a powerful weapon, we recommend the remodeled Springfield as the all-round rifle for American game. Our long experience and splendid equipment have made us preeminent in turning out the finest "sporters" made.

The following table gives the ballistics of these three rifles with cartridges of our own loading which are always available.

Cartridge	Bullet Weight Grains	Muzzle Velocity f. s.	Muzzle Energy ft. lbs.	Trajectory, 200 yds. Height at 100 yards Inches

 The Dewar Match!

LIFTING the famous international Small-Bore trophy—the Dewar cup—for the first time since the war the 1926 British team won a clean-cut victory by 60 points. It also set a new team record for this match, 7793 x £000. This tops the match team record made by the Americans last year by just two points.

Of this record making team of 20 great English shooters, 17—including the 16 highest—used Winchester Precision Ammunition.

Of the American twenty the three high men shot the famous WINCHESTER small-bore combination of victory—Model 52 and PRECISION. Ten members of the team used the Model 52 and five put their faith in PRECISION.

Virgil Richard, led the United States team with 397 x 400, only a single point below the individual record. He equalled the best British score, made by Jarman. Miller was second with 392 and Russell Wiles, Jr., third with 391.

So WINCHESTER PRECISION adds to its long record of victories, indoor and out, and to its sweeping successes in the English and Scotch matches at Bisley and Inverness, this clean sweep of the highest places in this greatest of small-bore team matches and this impressive team's world record.

And the Dewar match record, set at Camp Perry last year by E. F. Shearer of the American team with the WINCHESTER Model 52 and PRECISION—398 x 400—still stands as the individual record mark in Dewar competition.

All credit to the well-earned victory of British sportsmen. Hail to the hard fighting American twenty who gave their best to keep the cup this side the water.

PROTECT YOUR FRONT-SIGHT WITH A PARKER LOCKING FRONT-SIGHT PROTECTOR

This protector is designed especially for the Springfield rifle. It locks on tightly in such fashion that the lock may be removed for cleaning. When locked in place it keeps dirt out of the bore, but is not airtight and therefore will not cause rusting or sweating of the bore. It is typical of the long line of Parker products made for the convenience of riflemen.

These products are carried in stock by Mr. P. J. O'Hare, 552 Irvington Ave., Maplewood, N. J., U. S. A., or may be obtained from or directly from Jonas B. Oglænd, Inc., 15 Moore St., New York City.

Made to the Specifications of Experts

FOR many years Savage Model 19 N.R.A. Rifle has proved its worth in innumerable matches and marksmanship tests. Its accurate mechanism and fine balance are the result of unusual specifications gathered from the world's leading small bore rifle experts.

Improved Military Type Bolt Action

You can always be sure of the model 19 N.R.A. Bolt Action. It is simple, rapid, and always true. Rotation of the bolt at the opening movement half cocks it. Closing movement forward and downward completely cocks it. Firing pin is the finest possible. Takes five cartridge box magazine.

We Ask You : :

why did the winners of six of the recent Sea Girt inter-state rifle and pistol matches use US .22 N. R. A. cartridges unless they believed N. R. A.'s to be the most accurate and reliable small-bore ammunition available?

And aren't the ammunition beliefs of the type of shooters who wins matches most likely to be ammunition facts?

The shooters of US .22 N. R. A.'s who distinguished themselves in the Sea Girt small-bore pistol and rifle matches are as follows:

That you may derive the utmost satisfaction from your guns and ammunition by knowing more about them, our technical staff will gladly supply any shooting information you desire, without charge. If you have any difficult shooting problems, let us help you with them.

If you want to know all about Western's exclusive developments, about the Super-X shell that adds 15 to 20 yards to the shotgun's effective range; about Xpert, Western's latest smokeless shell that has set a new standard of low-priced excellence; or about the Lubaloy non-fouling bullet, the Boat Tail and Open-Point Expanding bullets, the .30-30 High Velocity, Marksman L. R. .22, and others, just mail your request on a post card today. It will also bring the complete story of Western's leadership in the development of modern ammunition.

I,200 POUNDS OF SNARLING FURY

From over the ledge comes the sound of crackling brush. . . . You stop dead still! . . . A loosened rock thuds down through the silence . . . then over the crest he comes . . . and there's your bear! Teeth gleaming . . . ears back . . . 1,200 pounds of snarling fury—full of fight!

When such danger looms hunters who have "been there" say, "Give me a real rifle and WESTERN ammunition." . . . The terrific deadliness of the Western Open-Point Expanding bullet has given a new meaning to killing power. Likewise the effectiveness of the 220-grain Soft-Point, the accuracy of the Boat Tail bullet, and the advantages of the famous Lubaloy non-fouling bullet, have contributed an important part to Western's leadership in the field of ammunition development.

Exclusive Western improvements have led to the selection of this better ammunition by scores of big game expeditions, by prominent sportsmen, and by champions who are setting national and world's records with rifle, revolver and shotgun. Try Western shells and cartridges. Shoot a few rounds of Marksman L. R. .22, used by many of the world's best shots to keep in practice. You'll know then that the World's Champion Ammunition will improve your shooting.

Sea Girt Again Proves the Great WINCHESTER Combination

THE small-bore matches on the September Sea Girt program again find shooters of the WINCHESTER small-bore combination of victory coming through strongly with the winning edge. Besides the significant fact that the three highest men on the American Dewar Match Team—Virgil Richard, William Miller, and Russell Wiles, Jr.,—all used the WINCHESTER Model 52 rifle and Precision ammunition, these notable triumphs for users of this combination were features of the Sea Girt matches:

Small-Bore Wimbledon—Won by Henry J. Gussman, New Haven, Conn., 99 x 100 in a field of 53 entries. Outranked Frank W. Rogers, also 99 x 100, by a hair. Each shot WINCHESTER Model 52 and Precision.

Sea Girt Small-Bore Long Range Match—200 yards. 21 entries. Won by Russell Wiles, Jr., of Illinois, 99 x 100. WINCHESTER Model 52 and Precision.

Individual Short Range Match—53 entries. Won by Virgil Richard, 396 x 400. WINCHESTER Model 52 and Precision.

The Short Range Team Match was won by the Pennsylvania Civilian Team.

Great shooting requires great shooters. It also requires rifle and ammunition that can be depended upon to give the shooter every point he earns.

Great shooters are constantly winning great victories with the great WINCHESTER small-bore combination of victory—a winner indoors and out.

"The ship that was a Navy"

SMALL wonder that the Navy and Nation thrill with pride at the very thought of the daring exploits of the U. S. Frigate Constitution; small wonder that the movement to restore "Old Ironsides" to her former glory has taken such hold!

Her impressive victories in the War of 1812 were all comparable with the famous engagement with H. M. S. Guerrière, pride of the British Navy, whom she met about 400 miles south of Newfoundland on August 19, 1812 and in twenty-five minutes reduced to a helpless, dismasted hulk.

Roaming the seas alone, ready to give battle to one or all of his Majesty's 1,000 warships, the Constitution well justified her appellation — "the ship that was a Navy."
